Labor Affairs Office!

We give you advice about disputes between foreign workers and employers, and spread information about labor policies.

If YOU

- think you will be dismissed or forced out of your job
aren't being paid basic wages
have unpaid overtime
are being harassed or discriminated want help with union negotiations as a worker or an employer

If YOU want to know about

- company labor policies as a worker or how to make them as an employer
annual paid leave or work hours
compensation when quitting
joining or forming a labor union
paternity, maternity, or caregiving leave part time and dispatch work
what to do before starting part time work

Are your rights being protected under the Labor Standards Act and other legislation?

- Employers must formally tell you about labor conditions and regulations when you start a job.
Employers must pay increased wages for overtime work.
Employers must give you annual paid leave if you work continuously for at least 6 months (with at least 80% attendance), even if you are a part-time worker.
Employers must undertake policies to prevent harassment and discrimination based on sexuality and nationality.
